JUDGE SHIPMAN'S DECISION. In the $1,000,000 Suit Against

Holmes, Booth & Haydens. As referee in the case of Benjamir Lawrence, for himself and the United States, vs Holmes, Booth & Haydens of this city, Judge Shipman of the United States disirict court, made a report at Hartford, yesterday, his finding being adverse to the plaintiff.

The action was to recover statutory penalties, amounting to $1,000,000, with costs and disbursements. The complaint was made that the defendants sent 10, 000 boxes containing unprotected paper fasteners, and that on each box was a label bearing words claiming that the fastener was patented. Charles McGill was quoted as the patentee. This, the plaintiff claimed, was an attempt to deceive the public. The Holmes, Booth & Haydens company made a genenal denial to the complaint, and the decision was in their favor.
